William Taylor Dead

Mr. William Taylor, of Lewisport, died at the home of his son, John Taylor, in this city, at midnight Thursday, says the Hawesville Clarion. Mr. Taylor received a stroke of paralysis some months ago, but his death was more directly traceable to flux and other complications. He frequently visited his son here, and while so doing ten days ago, was stricken with the illness that carried him away. The remains were taken to Lewisport at noon Friday for burial in the afternoon.

Wm. Taylor was born in Hardin county, Ky., January 11, 1835, and came to Hancock county in 1860, residing in and near Lewisport ever since. His wife, who was Miss Mildred Morgan, died 37 years ago. He leaves the following children: John Taylor, Hawesville; Mrs. Louis Hessleton, Lewisport, and Mrs. Samuel Hawes, Owensboro. Mr. Joe Taylor, of Lewisport, is a brother, while another brother, John Taylor, resided in Louisville. Deceased was a member of the Baptist church, and was universally liked.

USE OF OPIATES

Needless--From Charles B. Towns' "The Peril Of The Drug Habit" in The August Century.

It is perhaps a conservative estimate that only ten per cent. of the entire drug consumption in this country is applied to the purpose of blunting incurable pain. Thus ninety per cent. of the opiates used are, strictly speaking, unnecessary. In the innumerable cases that have come under my observation, seventy-five per cent. of the habitua users became such without reasonable excuse. Beginning with small occasional doses, they realize within a few weeks that they had lost self control and could not discontinue the use of the drug.

TEACHERS

Holding First-Class Certificates Are Entitled To Renewals Without Having Taught For Eight Consecutive Years.

Frankfort, Ky., July 20.—All teachers holding first class certificates are entitled to renewals of their certificates in the opinion of four judges of the court of appeals who had this question before them Friday. The case came up from the Shelby circuit court and involves a point in which a great many teachers in the state are interested.

The hearing was on a motion to dissolve the mandatory injunction to compel County Superintendent G. M. Money, of Shelby county, to renew the teacher's certificate of Miss Rosa Randolph. Chief Justice Hobson and Judges Lassing, Settle and Carroll sat in the case. The motion was argued by Assistant Attorney General M. M. Logan, and Miss Randolph was represented by Attorney L. C. Willis and County Judge Gilbert of Shelby.

The issue involves a construction of the law. The county superintendent insisted that before Miss Randolph could be entitled to a renewal certificate she must have taught eight consecutive years on original certificate. Miss Randolph's certificate was renewed for four years in 1904. In 1908 she took an examination and secured a certificate four years. She contended that this entitled her to the renewal. The court sustained the injunction, thus upholding Miss Randolph's contention.

CAMPAIGN FUND

Wilson-Marshall Democratic Nominees For The Presidency Need Help. Call On The People Rather Than The Big Interests.

CONTRIBUTE YOUR MITE

The Democratic Campaign Committee, headed by W. F. McCoombs, has been organized. They are getting ready for business, and to carry on a presidential campaign it takes money. Mr. Wilson will not look to the big interests to help him. He will look to the people whom he represents and will represent if elected. He calls on the country newspapers in every state to start a club for small contributions. The News will give its readers a chance to contribute to this fund in any amount from 25 cents to $5 or $10—not more than $10. Names of contributors will be published with amounts subscribed which will be forwarded to headquarters. Who will be the first to contribute?

All the applications that have been previously filed and recommended are still carried on the docket awaiting instructions from the department at Frankfort.

She is survived by one son, Leonard Smith, also four sisters and four brothers.

BEN JOHNSON

Suffers Affection Of Voice. Fears Trouble Is Serious As Result Of Being Struck When A Small Boy.

Washington, July 18.—Representative Ben Johnson of the Fourth Kentucky district, is suffering from an affection which has resulted in the almost total loss of his voice. Whether the character of the trouble can be determined and a cure effected, Mr. Johnson is unable to say. He has consulted specialists here in Washington, who state that there is absolutely no inflammation to be found, and they are at a loss to understand what caused the condition.

Mr. Johnson recalls that about thirty or more years ago, while playing ball at Bardtown, he was struck in the left side of the throat by a foul ball. A paralysis of the muscles resulted, and it was necessary for him to go to New York city for treatment. Specialists there told Mr. Johnson that while the trouble most probably would disappear there was about an equal chance of it returning unexpectedly. He is afraid that the latter has happened, as the trouble almost entirely disappeared a year or two after his visit to New York.

Prior to the first trouble, however, his voice has been unusually strong.

Malcolm Allen. House and lot. 1910 tax, $6.51; 1911 tax, $6.25. Total, $12.76	Thornton Bratcher. 43 acres land. 1911 tax, $6.10.

H. L. Morton. House and lot. 1911 tax, $4.83.	Robt. Nichols. House and lot. Tax 1911, $5.54.
W. G. Pumphrey, Sr. 81 acres land. 1911 tax, $7.30.	Chas. Riley. 22 acres land. 1911 tax, $2.51.

Chas. Monday. House and lot. 1911 tax, $5.05.

This only represents a small portion of the property that would have been advertised this week if space could have been had in this issue. However, next week I will proceed to advertise the list of every man, woman, or child in this district who has not paid their taxes in full for the year 1910-11. As some people think we will not sell them out to protect ourselves, and that they can put this matter off indefinitely, they will find when they go to pay the cost in these cases that we were very much in earnest. Those who owe taxes and whose names do not appear herein can save themselves the extra cost, by remitting in full before another issue of this paper.

SHOE PRICES ARE TO GO UP

Manufacturers Send Out Word
Of 20 Per Cent. Advance On September 1--Use Of Hides
Increasing, Values Rise Rapidly--All Patrons To Be Notified.

BLAME ON AUTOMOBILE

Chicago, July 29.—Automobiles, not content with encroaching upon the domain of the horse, will on or before September 1 have another sin to answer for.

The price of shoes is going up, and the automobile is blamed by manufacturers and dealers as being the principal cause of the increase in the price of leather.

Those who have been accustomed to paying $4 a pair for their fall footwear will be compelled to add another dollar to their shoe allowance this year or be content with an inferior quality of footwear. Not only does the raise affect shoes of the $5 variety, but shoes of all grades and prices.

"A 20 per cent raise in price on all shoes on or before September 1," is the word which manufacturers are sending out to wholesalers and retailers.

"The price of all sorts of shoes is sure to be increased before September 1," said J. Harry Selz of the Selz-Schwab company, "Only yesterday we were figuring up the price of leather, and we found that since January 1, 1908, the cost of leather had increased 72 per cent. The price of shoes has been raised from time to time to keep pace with this increase in the cost of leather, but another boost to the shoe price is now due."

"We have not made any increase in the price recently, but we have notified our patrons that on or before September 1 an increase of about 20 per cent must be made."

"There are many reasons for this increased price of leather, but the popularity of the automobile is one of the principal causes. The average man does not know how many sides of leather are being used today in the manufacture of automobiles. The great trouble is that the uses for leather are increasing daily, and the supply of raw material is decreasing. The large ranges of the west are being cut up into small farms, and the owner is now raising cereals instead of cattle and sheep."

"Also, the population of the world is increasing, and more shoes are being worn each year. This is true not only in the United States, but all over the world. Every variety of leather is increasing in price, and I think they will continue to do so."

Shoes, however, are not the only articles of wearing apparel which are advancing in price. The fall suit in 1912 will cost more than did its predecessor in 1911. The American Woolen company yesterday opened its lines in New York, and the prices showed an increase in price of from 10 to 20 cents a yard.

DAVISS COUNTY WHEAT POOL SOLD

From 12,000 to 15,000 Bushels to Nashville Mill--At Prices Ranging From $1.01 to 89 Cents.

At the meeting of the farmers who are members of the Daviess County Wheat Growers' association, which was held at the Green River Tobacco Growers' association Saturday, from 12,000 to 15,000 bushels of wheat in the 1912 pool were sold to the Liberty Mills of Nashville, Tenn., at prices ranging from $1.01 to 89 cents. According to the members of the association, the price is a very satisfactory one.

The deal with the Nashville concern was made through E. N. Williams who represented that concern and who made the best bid that was submitted, not all of the Owensboro millers bid on the pool.

For the No. 2 wheat that grades up to fifty-eight pounds to the bushel, the price is $1.01; for 57 it is $1; for 56, 98 cents; for 55, 95 cents; for 54, 93 cents; for 53, 90 cents, and for 52 it is 89 cents.

The delivery will be made to cars on the sidings in the Owensboro railroad yards and the buyers of the wheat will pay for its handling from the time that it is placed inside of the car doors. The deliveries are to start by the middle of this week.

It is impossible to determine the exact amount of wheat that will be in the pool, but from the figures that were made on the pledges at the meeting Saturday, it is believed that the total will run somewhere between 12,000 and 15,000 bushels.—Owensboro Messenger.

SHOULD NOT BE TOLERATED

Contributed by Robt. T. Enshaw

It is customary in many river cities to dispose of all sorts of refuse by dumping it on the river banks. The practice is reprehensible and should not be permitted.

Some of the progressive citizens of Frankfort discovered not long ago that the banks of the Kentucky River within the corporate limits of the city were gradually being transformed into a dumping ground for all sorts of litter and debris. The Citizens' Improvement Association took the matter up with the Mayor and City Council and as a result an order has gone forth that the river banks must be cleaned up and kept clean.

Upon investigation the Frankfort officials have found that it is a violation of Federal law to throw trash on the banks of a navigable stream or to dump refuse into the stream. Accordingly the co-operation of the Federal Government will be asked in guarding against future violations of this whole some statute. The combined efforts of the city and the Government should be equal to an abatement of the nuisance.

As a matter of civic pride cities ought to look more closely after the conditions along the river banks. In many cases river fronts are so carelessly kept as to become eyesores, where, with the needed attention, they could be made sanitary and attractive. There is no excuse for allowing a river to become a dumping ground. Refuse thrown in or along a navigable waterway becomes an obstruction to navigation and is also a menace to health and an offense to decency. It is a bad advertisement for any city which professes to be up to date and on no account should it be tolerated.—Courier-Journal.

Died In This City.

Harmon Ellis, bridgeman, sent out to flag train No. 66 near Lodi, Ky., fell asleep on the track. West bound train No. 63 came along struck him, cut off his left leg and crushed his body severely. The accident occurred Thursday morning and he was brought here immediately to Dr. Simons' Infirmary. He died at 12:30 that day. Ellis was twenty-one years old and weighed 210 pounds. His parents live near Brandenburg station.

A JOB FOR RELIGION

One trouble is that the politicians are trying to do by politics—by laws and platforms and candidates—too much of what can best, and perhaps only, be done by religion; trying to make people good; trying to rule the world by improved machinery, when the truth is that, though improved machinery may help, what is really important and effective is the spirit that is behind the working of all the machines.

And the same thing is true of what we call education. We keep trying to make it do too much that is best done by religion—soften manners, fortify the spirit, bring sanity and truth into life. The schools try to improve the machinery by which the mind works, and they do improve it, and they do well. But the great education is to Christianize the heart. With that for a thread you can string on whatever pearls the schools or the politicians supply, and be sure that the result will be an adornment. And more will be nice, and less won't greatly matter, for the spirit will be fed. But the value of the pearls will depend very much upon their correlation and the strength of the thread that holds them.

A very large proportion of all the stir in the world which is now proceeding must look for guidance and final settlement to religion. The relations of men seem all to be under new scrutiny. The old adjustments of them are challenged as unfair. All manner of new adjustments are proposed and are under examination. Most of them look dangerous to conservative minds. Many of them are dangerous. People who ought to know better go about with governmental propositions that remind one of the impulses of some striking mill hands to break the machinery of the mills because they are not satisfied as to hours and wages. We in this country are disturbed and made anxious; England is agitated and rocked; China is upheaved, with every anchor of her old civilization apparently torn loose from its holding; Mexico struggles and gasps in her effort to substitute a more representative government for the despotism that lately choked her into orderly proceedings and drove her on in the path of civilization. The outcome everywhere depends on the individual capacity and character of the peoples concerned, and that depends largely on the religion that has shaped their minds and standards. Where there is a sufficient popular capacity to choose between what is feasible and what is not, between what is just and what is crazy, the changes and readjustments that are due will come safely and with comparative tranquility. Where the popular mind is not mature enough to make wise choices, some form of the strong hand will eventually keep order and drive who must be driven. What is being tested is how far Christianity has brought civilization. For Christianity is at the bottom of modern democracy, its basis, its chief inspiration, and its indispensable ingredient and safeguard.

Two great services, among others, the Christian religion does for democracy. It teaches good-will to men, making every man his brother's keeper, and it creates, or emphasizes, new values in life—spiritual values which make those who possess them less eager for the material goods and more patient with those to whom material possessions are all-important. The value in these times, and in all times, of a religion that at the same time quickens sympathy with labor and abates jealousy of capital is obvious.—Harper's Weekly.

During the summer months mother of young children should watch for any unnatural looseness of the bowels. When given prompt attention at this time serious trouble may be avoided. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

Very Important School Question Is Decided

Very Important School

Question Is Decided

Frankfort, Ky., July 20.—Judges Hobson, Lassing, Settle and Carroll, of the court of appeals, today heard arguments on a motion to dissolve a mandatory injunction in the Shelby circuit court giving Miss Rosa Randolph the right to compel G. M. Money, county superintendent, to renew her teacher's certificate for four years. In 1909 Miss Randolph obtained a certificate for four years, which was renewed in 1914, and in 1908 Miss Randolph again stood an examination and obtained a certificate which expired in 1912. She asked that the county superintendent renew her certificate, claiming that on account of teaching eight consecutive years she is entitled to a renewal. The superintendent refused to renew the certificate. The appellate court held that Miss Randolph's certificate can be renewed indefinitely under the new school law.

Has Wonderful Horse.

Walter Hawkins, a sophomore student of C. H. S., is spending his vacation at his country home near town. He has farming in his "bones" and is going to make a specialty of stock. Mr. Hawkins has a wonderful horse and is taking pains to educate it. It has not been a year since he bought the horse and she has learned to tell her age, and when Mr. Hawkins drops his hat, she stops and picks it up for him. Besides these, she does other remarkable tricks. Mr. Hawkins has the kindest feeling for horses and says their dispositions are different just like those of people. He loathes to see men treat them unkindly and believes that horses should be given the kindest care.

One way to relieve habitual constipation is to take regularly a mild laxative. Doan's Regulets are recommended for this purpose. 25c a box at all drug stores.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET

FOR PRESIDENT

WOODROW WILSON
of New Jersey

FOR VICE PRESIDENT

THOMAS R. MARSHALL
of Indiana

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

A NEW NAPOLEON.

Our compliments to the modest but mighty efficient Mr. McCombs, field marshal of the Wilson forces at Baltimore. His name does not appear in the ordinary reference books of contemporary biography, but it is bound to get there very soon, and likewise into the pages of history.

Mr. McCombs has met the most seasoned veterans of political manipulations and they are his. He is a man of sense and a man of sand, and, better than all, a man of the cleanest and most respectable methods. Before we hear more of him we hasten to record this unsolicited tribute of admiration.—New York Sun.

Crops along the pike are looking fine. Farms all show good work and attention. Land is being improved and built up, farmers are sowing peas and clover, both of which show fine stands; better corn and tobacco is being grown, dwellings painted, concrete walks put down, barns whitewashed, lawns kept mowed, and it really makes one feel good to travel along the pike and see the improved condition of things in general. There is one thing needed, however, and that is the improvement of the pike which is in a very bad condition in some places. Some work is being done on it near Hardinsburg, but on this end where it is needed most, nothing is doing. It takes money and work to keep up a pike the same as a dirt road, and it should not be neglected. If this pike belonged to a corporation, as it once did, there would be a great howl go up, and next court would find a score of people laying complaint before the grand jury, but now that it is free and belongs to everybody, it is nobody's business to keep it in the best condition.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson, in addressing the Democratic members of Congress who visited him a few days ago at Seagirt, said: "The real difficulty of politics in our modern days is that men have not laid their minds alongside one another in having a common interest in what they seek to do."

No truer statement could be made than the above, especially by a man who is seeking the highest office in the gift of the people. It is a matter of history that the great mass of the people have not had much to say in those matters that affect their interest. Mr. Wilson voices the sentiment of the mass of the people of this country, when he says that they should have a common interest in what they seek to do. This is the Democratic doctrine, and the principle which Mr. Wilson will carry out if he is elected President.

Attorney Jesse R. Eskridge, of Hardinsburg, was in the city last week, and speaking of political conditions, Mr. Eskridge said that Mr. Taft was not the nominee of the Republican party. Mr. Eskridge is an ardent supporter of Mr. Roosevelt, and besides he was present before the National Republican Committee in Chicago that turned down all the Roosevelt delegates. He said the ruling of the committee was absolutely a one sided affair, and he believed that at present the Republican party was hopelessly split. He said also, that the followers of Mr. Roosevelt in this county, would soon meet in Hardinsburg and look after the matter of appointing delegates to the third party convention, billed in Chicago, for August 5th next.

The more we look into politics, the clearer we see how great is the character of William Jennings Bryan. Even in his defeats, he never yielded to the temptations that come to a man in politics. We wish the political workers in the presidential campaign might take him as an example and look to him for an inspiration when they are tempted by campaign funds and whiskey this year. It is necessary to have money to carry on a campaign, to cover the expenses of speaking tours, of correspondence and literature and public meetings. For these matters, campaign funds should be solely used, and not for buying men's votes and honor. Read the article in this week's issue from Harper's Weekly.

Jeff Hook says his hat is in the ring for County Judge of Breckenridge county on the Democratic ticket. He says he is going to tour the county in his machine and speak from the rear end at every precinct in the county. Says he don't believe in the old-time way of making a bush to bush campaign. He believes the people ought to know the man they vote for; what he stands for and what he intends to do if elected. There are a few Republicans in the ring too—for instance his brother-in-law, Gus Shellman, Judge Waggoner, John Akers and Davis Dowell. He says he can beat the whole bunch or any one of them.

The article "A young man's mistake," published in last week's issue, saying that a fellow should marry a girl who knows nothing of cooking, has raised an uproar among the young women here. They declare that such philosophy is only reasonable on paper and that the girl who knows how to cook is the girl alone who can make a man happy. And they are working in Cloverport, making mint jelly for lamb chops and plum jelly for baked chicken. One young lady has made twenty-two glasses of plum jelly and another one hundred glasses of grape to put away on the pantry shelf for next winter.

This is to be a clean campaign. It is made up of clean men of business with clean politicians working in the open under a candidate so recently an amateur and yet so easily routing the professionals that it will be worth watching. There is no sound reason that we can see why a political campaign shouldn't be carried on in the sight of everybody. There should be no mystery or trickery in it. Just a plain open fight for the right of the people to govern.

The bubonic plague in Porto Rico and Cuba continues serious. Its spread is traceable to the rat infection. The Health Commissioner of Pensacola, Fla., has appropriated $250 for the purchase of rats at three cents each. Besides the fly swatters club, we shall have to join the rat catchers brigade! What next must we do to better sanitary conditions? Six rats were caught in one Cloverport business house Monday morning.

The Republican State Central Committee has appointed the Hon. Chas. Blanford as a member of the Advisory State Committee to work in connection with the Campaign Committee. Mr. Blanford has been a campaigner for the Republican party in this State and Nation for nearly forty years. He is always on the firing line for his party, and the Committee has made no mistake in his appointment.

Miss Nell Moorman, of Glen Dean, is writing most interesting letters home from the old country. "Italy has no Sunday," she writes, "and nearly all the shops keep open the day long." Cloverport has not a close association with Florence, but they would have most congenial views about keeping stores open on Sunday, were they to exchange shop talk.

Send in your contributions for the Wilson campaign fund. The people never had a truer representative. If your contribution is small—like the widow's mite—it will be appreciated. This is a great fight for the people. If we don't win now we never can win. This money will not be used to buy votes. It is for legitimate campaign purposes.

Those who are not taking advantage of the pleasure the river affords are missing the greatest recreation of their life. Just drop things at home a few hours and go down to the river and jump in! You will feel a thousand times better, ten years younger and your disposition will be sweeter and saner. Those who cannot leave home for a vacation have just as good time in store here.

Caruso, the highest paid tenor in the world, has just signed a contract to sing at the National Opera House in Buenos Ayres for at least twelve performances at $7,000 each.

In reading the Breckenridge News, do not skip any page. Live matter is scattered on every page along with the feature articles and advertisements.

Mrs. Hetty Green at the age of seventy-eight years has joined the Episcopal church and was baptized Saturday afternoon.

Woodrow Wilson is not making very much noise about his campaign, but he is putting it over just the same.

Taft and Teddy had just as well come across for Wilson. It's mighty lonesome pulling along by themselves.

This is not for publication, but we were surely an original Marshall man.

There is no room for little toe politicians in this campaign.

Does Not Approve.

Dear News: If you will allow space in your valuable paper I will say to the Fair Association that I think they have made a great mistake in giving such prominence to the whiskey ad in their catalog. I am sure that the better class of your patrons do not endorse advertising that is the Devil's chief agency in destroying mind, body and soul.

Respectfully,
C. H. Claycomb.

Has Missed The News.

Dear News: Drowned? Not a bit of it. We refused to go to the hill country of North Louisiana for five weeks during the worst water. I won't attempt to tell you the havoc the great old "Father of Waters" can play when he gets on a big rampage. I think satan himself, as in the days of Job, must have been behind this flood. But hurrah for "Dixie", neither fire, sword nor flood can vanquish her!

I've been missing the News for quite a while and can't get on without it any longer, for those dear folks of mine in "Auld Kaintuck" have lost the art of writing.

May success in its fullest sense, ever be yours. Mrs. Jenny Keith Lusk, Rayville, La.

Protecting Concrete From Frost.

A concrete reservoir, 45 ft. in diameter and 21 ft. high, partly above and partly below ground, erected in Virginia, Minn., by the Electric Power & Water Co., was successfully protected against freezing by covering the exposed part with a layer of clay, then a layer of cinders and above that a second layer of clay. When this covering was removed last spring, the tank showed no sign of injury by frost, despite the severe winter.—From the August Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Dog-on Dog Again.

As the conductor left the Mallorys to their own devices, it rushed over him anew what sacrilege had been attempted—a fool bride had asked him to stop the Trans-American of all trains!—to go shopping of all things!

He stormed into the smoking room to open the safety valve of his wrath, and found the porter just coming out of the buffet cell with a tray, two hollow-stemmed glasses and a bottle swaddled in a napkin.

"Say, Ellsworth, what in — do you suppose that female back there wants?—wants me to hold the Trans-American while—"

But the porter was in a hurry himself. He was about to serve champagne, and he cut the conductor short:

"Scuse me, boss, but they's a lovin' couple in the stateroom forward that is in a powerful hurry for this. I can't talk to you now. I'll see you later." And he swaggered off, leaving the door of the buffet open. The conductor paused to close it, glanced in, started, stared, glared, roared:

"What's this! Well, I'll be a dog smuggled in here! I'll break that coon's head. Come out of there, you miserable ordinary hound." He seized the incredulous Snoozleums by the scruff of his neck, growling, "It's you for the baggage car ahead," and dashed out with his prey, just as Mallory, now getting new bearings on Marjorie's character, spoke across the rampart of his Napoleonic folded arms:

"Well, you're a nice one!—making violent love to a conductor before my very eyes. A minute more and I would have—"

She silenced him with a snap: "Don't you speak to me! I hate you! I hate all men. The more I know men the more I like—this reminded her, and she asked anxiously: "Where is Snoozleums?"

Mallory, impatient at the shift of subject, snapped back: "Oh, I left him in the buffet with the waiter. What I want to know is how you dare to—"

"Was it a colored waiter?"

"Of course. But I'm not speaking of—"

"But suppose he should bite him?"

"Oh, you can't hurt those nigger waiters. I started to say—"

"But I can't have Snoozleums biting colored people. It might not agree with him. Get him at once."

Mallory trembled with suppressed rage like an overloaded boiler, but he gave up and growled: "Oh, Lord, all right. I'll get him when I've finished—"

"Go get him this minute. And bring the poor darling back to his mother."

"His mother! Ye gods!" cried Mallory, wildly. He turned away and dashed into the men's room with a furious: "Where's that damned dog?"

He met the porter just returning. The porter smiled: "He's right in here, sir," and opened the buffet door. His eyes popped and his jaw sagged: "Why, I left him here just a minute ago."

"You left the window open, too," Mallory observed. "Well, I guess he's gone."

The porter was panic-stricken: "Oh, I'm terrible sorry, boss. I wouldn't have lost that dog for a fortune. If you was to hit me with a axe I wouldn't mind."

To his utter befuddlement, Mallory grinned and winked at him, and murmured: "Oh, that's all right. Don't worry." And actually laid half a dollar in his palm. Leaving the black lids batting over the starting eyes, Mallory pulled his smile into a long face and went back to Marjorie like an undertaker: "My love, prepare yourself for bad news."

Marjorie looked up, startled and apprehensive: "Snoozleums is ill. He did bite the darkey."

"Worse than that—he—he—fell out of the window."

"When!" she shrieked, "in heaven's name—when?"

"He was there just a minute ago, the waiter says."

Marjorie went into instant hysterics, wringing her hands and sobbing: "Oh, my darling, my poor child—stop the train at once!"

She began to pound Mallory's shoulders and shake him frantically. He had never seen her this way either. He was getting his education in advance. He tried to calm her with inept words: "How can I stop the train? Now, dearie, he was only a dog. But after all, he was only a dog."

She rounded on him like a panther: "Only a dog! He was worth a dozen men like you. You find the conductor at once, command him to stop this train—and back up! I don't care if he has to go back ten miles. Run, tell him at once. Now, you run!"

Mallory stared at her as if she had gone mad, but he set out to run somewhere, anywhere. Marjorie paced up and down distractedly, tearing her hair and moaning, "Snoozleums, Snoozleums! My child. My poor child!" At length her wildly roving eyes noted the bell rope. She stared, pondered, nodded her head, clutched at it, could not reach it, jumped for it several times in vain, then seized a chair, swung it into place, stood up in it, gripped the rope, and came down on it with all her weight, dropping to the floor and jumping up and down in a frenzied dance. In the distance the engine could be heard faintly whistling, whistling for every pull.

The engineer, far ahead, could not imagine what unheard-of crisis could bring about such mad signals. The fireman yelled:

"I bet that crazy conductor is attacked with an epileptic fit."

But there was no disputing the command. The engine was reversed, the air brakes set, the sand run out and every effort made to pull the iron horse, as it were, back on its haunches.

The grinding, squealing, jolting, shook the train like an earthquake. The shrieking of the whistle froze the blood like a woman's cry of "Murder!" in the night. The women among the passengers echoed the screams. The men turned pale and braced themselves for the shock of collision. Some of them were mumbling prayers. Dr. Temple and Jimmie Wellington, with one idea in their dissimilar souls, dashed from the smoking room to go to their wives.

Ashton and Wedgewood, with no one to care for but themselves, seized windows and tried to fight them open. At last they budged a sash and knelt down to thrust their heads out.

"I don't see a beastly thing ahead," said Wedgewood, "except the heads of other fools."

"We're slowing down though," said Ashton, "she stops! We're safe. Thank God!" And he collapsed into a chair. Wedgewood collapsed into another, gasping: "Whatevah are we safe from, I wonder?"

The train-crew and various passengers descended and ran alongside the train asking questions. Panic gave way to mystery. Even Dr. Temple came back into the smoking room to finish a precious cigar he had been at work on. He was followed by Little Jimmie, who had not quite reached his wife when the stopping of the train put an end to his excuse for chivalry. He was regretfully mumbling:

"It would have been such a good shams to shave my life's wife—I mean my—I don't know what I mean. He sank into a chair and ordered a drink; then suddenly remembered his vow, and with great heroism, rescinded the order.

Mallory, finding that the train was checked just before he reached the conductor, saw that official's bewildered wrath at the stoppage and had a fearsome intuition that Marjorie had somehow done the deed. He hurried back to the observation room, where he found her charging up and down, still distraught. He paused at a safe distance and said:

"The train has stopped, my dear. Somebody rang the bell."

"I guess somebody did!" Marjorie answered, with a proud toss of the head. "Where's the conductor?"

"He's looking for the fellow that pulled the rope."

"You go tell him to back up—and slowly, too."

"No, thank you!" said Mallory. He was a brave young man, but he was not bearing the conductors of stopped expresses. Already the conductor's voice was heard in the smoking room, where he appeared with the rush and roar of a Bashan bull.

"Well!" he belloved, "which one of you guys pulled that rope?"

"It was nobody here, sir," Dr. Temple meekly explained. The conductor transfixed him with a baleful glare: "I wouldn't believe a gambler on oath. I bet you did it."

"I assure you, sir," Wedgewood interposed, "he didn't touch it. I was heah."

The conductor waved him aside and charged into the observation room, followed by all the passengers in an awe-struck rabble. Here, too, the conductor thundered: "Who pulled that rope? Speak up somebody!"

Mallory was about to sacrifice himself to save Marjorie, but she met the conductor's black rage with the withering contempt of a young queen: "I pulled the old rope. Whom did you suppose?"

The conductor almost dropped with apoplexy at finding himself with nobody to vent his immense rage on, but this pink and white slip. "You!" he gulped, "well, what in— Say, in the name of—why, don't you know it's a penitentiary offense to stop a train this way?"

Marjorie tossed her head a little higher, grew a little calmer: "What do I care? I want you to back up."

The conductor was reduced to a wet rag, a feeble echo: "Back up—the train up?"

"Yes, back the train up," Marjorie answered, resolutely, "and go slowly till I tell you to stop."

The conductor stared at her a moment, then whirled on Mallory: "Say, what in hell's the matter with your wife?"

Mallory was saved from the problem of answering by Marjorie's abrupt change from a young Tsarina rebuking a serf, to a terrified mother. She flung out imploring palms and with a gush of tears pleaded: "Won't you please back up? My darling child fell off the train!"

The conductor's rage fell away in an instant. "Your child fell off the train!" he gasped. "Good Lord! How old was he?"

With one hand he was groping for the bell cord to give the signal, with the other he opened the door to look back along the track.

"He was two years old," Marjorie sobbed.

"Oh, that's too bad!" the conductor groaned. "What did he look like?"

"He had a pink ribbon round his neck."

"A pink ribbon—oh, the poor little fellow! the poor little fellow!"

"And a long curly tail."

The conductor swung round with a yell: "A curly tail!—your son?"

"My dog!" Marjorie roared back at him.

The conductor's voice cracked weakly as he shrieked: "Your dog! You stopped this train for a fool dog?"

"He wasn't a fool dog," Marjorie retorted, facing him down, "he knows more than you do."

The conductor threw up his hands: "Well, don't you women beat—"

He studied Marjorie as if she were some curious freak of nature. Suddenly an idea struck into his daze: "Say, what kind of a dog was it?—a measly little cheese-hound?"

"He was a noble, beautiful soul with wonderful eyes and adorable ears."

The conductor was growing weaker and weaker: "Well, don't worry. I got him. He's in the baggage car."

Marjorie stared at him unbelievably. The news seemed too gloriously beautiful to be true. "He isn't dead—Snoozleums is not dead!" she cried, "he lives! He lives! You have saved him." And once more she flung herself upon the conductor. He tried to bat her off like a gnat, and Mallory came to his rescue by dragging her away and showing her into a chair. But she saw only the noble conductor: "Oh, you dear, good, kind angel. Get him at once."

"He stays in the baggage car," the conductor answered, firmly and as he supposed, finally.

"But Snoozleums doesn't like baggage cars," Marjorie smiled. "He won't ride in one."

"He'll ride in this one or I'll wring his neck."

"You fiend in human flesh!" Marjorie shrieked away from him in horror, and he found courage to seize the bell rope and yank it viciously with a sardonic: "Please, may I start this train?"

The whistle tooted faintly. The bell began to hammer, the train to creak and writhe and click. The conductor pulled his cap down hard and started forward. Marjorie seized his sleeve: "Oh, I implore you, don't consign that poor sweet child to the horrid baggage car. If you have a human heart in your breast, hear my prayer."

The conductor surrendered unconditionally: "Oh, Lord, all right, all right. I'll lose my job, but if you'll keep quiet, I'll bring him to you." And he slunk out meekly, followed by the passengers, who were shaking their heads in wonderment at this most amazing feat of this most amazing bride.

When they were alone once more, Marjorie, as radiant as April after a storm, turned her sunshiny smile on Mallory:

"Isn't it glorious to have our little Snoozleums alive and well?"

But Mallory was feeling like a March day. He answered with a sly chuckle: "You care more for the dog than you do for me."

"Why shouldn't I?" Marjorie answered with wide eyes, "Snoozleums never would have brought me on a wild goose eelment like this. Heaven knows he didn't want to come."

Mallory repeated the indictment: "You love a dog better than you love your husband."

"My what?" Marjorie laughed, then she spoke with lofty condescension: "Harry Mallory, if you're going to be jealous of that dog, I'll never marry you the longest day I live."

"So you'll let a dog come between us?" he demanded.

"I wouldn't give up Snoozleums for a hundred husbands," she retorted.

"I'm glad to know it in time," Mallory said. "You'd better give me back that wedding ring."

Marjorie's heart stopped at this, but her pride was in arms. She drew herself up, slid the ring from her finger, and held it out as if she scorned it: "With pleasure. Good afternoon, Mr. Mallory."

Mallory took it as if it were the merest trifle, bowed and murmured: "Good afternoon, Miss Newton."

He stalked out and she turned her back on him. A casual witness would have said that they were too indifferent to each other even to feel anger. As a matter of romantic fact, each was on fire with love, and aching madly with regret. Each longed for strength to whirl round with outflung arms of reconciliation, and neither could be so brave. And so they parted, each harking back fiercely for one word of recall from the other. But neither spoke, and Marjorie sat staring at nothing through raining eyes, while Mallory strode into the Men's Room as melancholy as Hamlet with Yorick's skull in his hands.

It was their first great quarrel, and they were convinced that the world might as well come to an end.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Woman-Hater's Relapse.

The observation room was as lonely as a deserted battlefield and Marjorie as dejected as a wounded soldier left behind, and perishing of thirst, when the conductor came back with Snoozleums in his arms.

He regarded with contemptuous awe the petty cause of so great an event as the stopping of the Trans-American. He expected to see Marjorie receive the returned prodigal with wild rapture, but she didn't even smile when he said:

"Here's your powder-puff."

She just took Snoozleums on her lap, and looking up with wet eyes and a sad smile, murmured:

"Thank you very much. You're the nicest conductor I ever met. If you ever want another position, I'll see that my father gets you one."

It was like offering the kaiser a new job, but the conductor swallowed the insult and sought to repay it with irony.

EXCUSE ME

oured. He set it inside his sanctum and then bustled round with ice-filled glasses and a siphon.

When Little Jimmie offered of the flask to Dr. Temple, the clergyman put out his hand with a politely horrified: "No, thank you."

Lathrop frightened him with a sudden comment: "Look at that gesture! Doc, I'd almost swear you were a parson."

Mallory whirled on him with the eyes of a hawk about to pounce, and "The very idea!" was the best disclaimer Dr. Temple could manage, suddenly finding himself suspected. Ashton put in with, "The only way to disprove it, Doc, is to join us."

The poor old clergyman, too deeply involved in his deception to brave confession now, decided to do and dare all. He stammered, "Er—ah—certainly," and held out his hand for his share of the poison. Little Jimmie winked at the others and almost filled the glass. The innocent doctor bowed his thanks. When the porter reached him and prepared to fill the remainder of the glass from the siphon, the parson waved him aside with a misguided caution:

"No, thanks. I'll not mix them." Mallory turned away with a sigh: "He takes his straight. He's no parson."

Then they forgot the doctor in curiosity as to Lathrop's sudden spasm of generosity—with Wellington's liquor. Wedgewood voiced the general curiosity when he said:

"What's the old woman-hater up to now?"

"Woman-hater?" laughed Ira. "It's the old story. I'm going to follow Mallory's example—marriage."

"I hope you succeed," said Mallory. "Wherever did you pick up the bride?" said Wedgewood, mellowing with the long glass in his hand.

"Brides are easy," said Mallory, with surprising cynicism. "Where do you get the parson?"

"Hang the parson," Wedgewood repeated. "Who's the gel?"

"I'll bet I know who she is," Ashton interposed; "it's that nectarine of a damsel who got on at Green River."

"Not the same!" Lathrop roared.

"I found my bride blooming here all the while. Girl I used to spark back in Brattleboro, Vt. I've been vowing for years that I'd live and die an old maid. I've kept my head out of the noose all this time—till I struck this train and met up with Anne. We got to talking over old times—waking up old sentiments. She got on my nerves. I got on hers. Finally I said, 'Aw, hell, let's get married. Save price of one stateroom to China anyway.' She says, 'Damned if I don't!'—or words to that effect."

Mallory broke in with feverish interest: "But you said you were going to get married on this train."

"Nothing easier. Here's how!" and he raised his glass, but Mallory hauled it down to demand: "How? that's what I want to know. How are you going to get married on this parsonless express. Have you got a little minister in your suitcase?"

Ira beamed with added pride as he explained:

"Well, you see, when I used to court Anne I had a rival—Charlie Selby by his name was. I thought he cut me out, but he became a clergyman in Utah—Oh, Charlie! I telegraphed him that I was passing through Ogden, and would he come down to the train and marry me to a charming lady. He always wanted to marry Anne. I thought it would be a durned good joke to let him marry her—to me."

"D-did he accept?" Mallory asked, excitedly, "is he coming?"

"He is—he did—here's his telegram," said Ira. "He brings the license and the ring." He passed it over, and as Mallory read it a look of hope spread across his face. But Ira was saying: "We're going to have the wedding obsequies right here in this car. You're all invited. Will you come?"

Thousands Have Kidney

Trouble and Never Suspect it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

There was a general yell of acceptance and Ashton began to sing, "There Was I Waiting at the Church." Then he led a sort of Indian waltz dance round the next victim of the matrimonial stake. At the end of the bullabuloo all the men charged their glasses, and drained them with an uproarious "How!"

Poor Dr. Temple had taken luxurious delight in the success of his disguise and in the prospect of watching some other clergyman working while he rested. He joined the dance as gaily, if not as gracefully, as any of the rest, and in a final triumph of recklessness, he tossed off a bumper of straight whiskey.

Instantly his "How!" changed to "Wow!" and then his throat clamped fast with a terrific spasm that flung the tears from his eyes. He bent and writhed in a silent paroxysm till he was pounded and shaken back to life and water poured down his throat to reopen a passage.

The others thought he had merely choked and made no comment other than sympathy. They could not have dreamed that the old "physician" was as ignorant of the taste as of the vigor of pure spirits.

After a riot of handshaking and good wishes, Ira was permitted to escape with his life. Mallory followed him to the vestibule, when he caught him by the sleeve with an anxious:

"Excuse me."

"Well, my boy—"

"Your minister—after you get through with him—may I use him?"

"May you—what? Why do you want a minister?"

"To get married."

"Again? Good Lord, are you a Mormon?"

"Me a Mormon!"

"Then what do you want with an extra wife? It's against the law—even in Utah."

"You don't understand."

"My boy, one of us is disgracefully drunk."

"Well, I'm not," said Mallory, and then after a fierce inner debate, he decided to take Lathrop into his confidence. The words came hard after so long a duplicity, but at last they were out:

"Mr. Lathrop, I'm not really married to my wife."

"You young scoundrel!"

But his fury changed to pity when he heard the history of Mallory's ill-fated efforts, and he promised not only to lend Mallory his minister at second-hand, but also to keep the whole affair a secret, for Mallory explained his intention of having his own ceremony in the baggage-car, or somewhere out of sight of the other passengers.

Mallory's face was now aglow as the cold embers of hope leaped into sudden blaze. He wrung Lathrop's hand, saying: "Lord love you, you've saved my life—wife—both."

Then he turned and ran to Marjorie with the good news. He had quite forgotten their epoch-making separation. And she was so glad to see him smiling at her again that she forgot it, too. He came tearing into the observation room and took her by the shoulders, whispering: "Oh, Marjorie, Marjorie, I've got him! I've got him!"

"No, I've got him," she said, swinging Snoodleums into view.

Mallory swung him back out of the way: "I don't mean a poodle, I mean a parson. I've got a parson."

"No! I can't believe it! Where is he?" She began to dance with delight, but she stopped when he explained:

"Well, I haven't got him yet, but I'm going to get one."

"What—again?" she groaned, weary of this old bunco game of hope.

"It's a real live one this time," Mallory insisted. "Mr. Lathrop has ordered a minister and he's going to lend him to me as soon as he's through with him, and we'll be married on this train."

Marjorie was overwhelmed, but she felt it becoming in her to be a trifle coy. So she pouted: "But you won't want me for a bride now. I'm such a fright."

He took the bait, hook and all: "I never saw you looking so adorable."

"Honestly? Oh, but it will be glorious to be Mrs. First Lieutenant Mallory."

"Glorious!"

"I must telegraph home—and sign my new name. Won't mamma be pleased?"

"Won't she?" said Mallory, with just a trace of dubiety.

Then Marjorie grew serious with a new idea: "I wonder if mamma and papa have missed me yet?"

Mallory laughed: "After three days' disappearance, I shouldn't be surprised."

"Perhaps they are worrying about me."

"I shouldn't be surprised."

"The poor dears! I'd better write them a telegram at once."

"An excellent idea."

She ran to the desk, found blank forms and then paused with knitted brow: "It will be very hard to say all I've got to say in ten words."

"Hang the expense," Mallory sniffed magnificently, "I'm paying your bills now."

But Marjorie tried to look very matronly: "Send a night letter in the day time! No, indeed, we must begin to economize."

Mallory was touched by this new revelation of her future housewifely thrift. He hugged her hard and reminded her that she could send a day-letter by wire.

"An excellent idea," she said. "Now, don't bother me. You go on and read your paper, read about Mattie. I'll never be jealous of her—him—of anybody—again."

"You shall never have cause for jealousy, my own."

But fate was not finished with the "titillation of the unfortunate pair, and already new trouble was stroiling in their direction."

DOUBLY PROVEN

Cloverport Readers Can No Longer Doubt The Evidence.

This grateful citizen testified long ago.

Told of quick relief—of undoubted benefit.

The facts are now confirmed. Such testimony is complete—the evidence conclusive.

It forms convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. A. L. Alms, 607 Locust St., Owensboro, Ky., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and consider them a superior kidney remedy. Doan's Kidney Pills promptly relieved backache, difficulty with the kidney secretions and pains in the back and top part of my head. They were procured and we have every confidence in them."

The above statement was given May 9, 1907 and when Mrs. Alms was interviewed on February 20, 1913 she said: "I have not used Doan's Kidney Pills of late, as the cure they effected some time ago has been permanent. You are at liberty to continue publishing my former statement."

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MY EXPERIMENTS WITH PAPER BAG COOKERY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

When Soyer's paper bag method of cooking was first brought to my attention by friends, who, rightly or wrongly, seem to have a high opinion of my abilities as a cook, I admit that I was skeptical of its practicality. Indeed, I was more than that—I was rather firm in my belief that it could not prove out. But I was induced to put the system to a trial—and, lo and behold!—the very first trial made me an enthusiastic follower of M. Soyer. Since then I have been doing all my cooking by the Soyer method, and each succeeding day more than ever convinces me that any woman, simply by following Soyer's general directions, and using that good common sense and care which are essential to all good cooking, can master the Soyer paper bag method of cooking in a very short time, and will find it a great boon both to herself and to all the members of her household.

Following M. Soyer's general directions for paper bag cookery, I speedily learned that there are sundry commandments to be observed while pursuing his method of cooking.

The first and greatest of these is to get the right bag, which is made specially for cooking, is paraffined, odorless even when crumbly-crisp, sanitary and to be had in sizes big enough to hold a Thanksgiving turkey, or tiny enough for a single chop.

Next, nearly as important, is to grease the bag inside liberally, using butter, lard, oil, drippings or a very fat rind of bacon.

Further, proportion your bag-size to what it is destined to hold. The closer the fit of bag and contents, the better, and the more even and compact the lay of the food, the less trouble in handling.

Use a footed wire broiler, or very open grid-shelf, in the oven. All paper bag cooking is done in the oven. If a gas oven, it must be lighted eight to ten minutes before putting in the food and kept at blazing heat until the bag corners scorch lightly; then slacken the heat a third or even half throughout the rest of the time of cooking.

Be sure to lay the bags in the oven with the seam uppermost, especially if water has been put inside. Seams will steam open now and then—if the opening is downward there will be a leakage and much bother.

Finally, it is important to remember that all manipulation, seasoning and flavoring of food must be attended to before it is put in bags. There can be no stirring or tossing in the course of paper bag cooking. Nor must a bag be opened at any time during cooking; such action is absolutely unnecessary if directions are faithfully followed.

A PAPER BAG DINNER.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Roast Beef, Round, Ribs, or Sirloin.—Grease well with drippings, but do not season. Put in bag, lay on a wire broiler, and cook in a moderate oven. For a three-pound joint allow forty-five minutes; for seven-pound, one hour and twenty minutes.

Lima Beans.—Take a quart of Lima beans, add two ounces of butter, four ounces of diced ham, a little sugar and salt, a good teaspoonful of flour, and a few sweet herbs to taste. Put in a paper bag with half a pint of water, seal up, and cook for an hour in a moderate oven.

Baked Potatoes.—Thoroughly wash twelve good-sized potatoes. Make a few small slits in them, but do not peel. Place in a paper bag, with one tablespoonful of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size.

Tomatoes.—Place six tomatoes in boiling water for twenty-five seconds. Peel, butter your paper bag, put in tomatoes with salt, pepper, a suspicion of sugar, and a small piece of butter. Put the bag on the broiler after sealing, and cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven.

Apples a la Duchesse.—Wash and dry ten large apples. Core them, put stick-cinnamon—only a bit—in the place of each core, and pour over them a tablespoonful of rum. Put in a buttered bag, and bake on the broiler thirty minutes. When quite done, dish up, remove the cinnamon, and fill the centers with jam—strawberry, raspberry, or apricot. Cover with stiffly whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve, or set on ice till wanted. Use sweet apples and let them cool before adding the jam and cream.

Light the gas range eight minutes before beginning to cook, or open the draughts so the coal range will be hot. Put the roast on first, upon the lowest shelf. Put the apples upon the upper shelf, so as to leave room for the tomatoes beside them. As soon as the tomatoes are done, remove, set the bag in a plate, and stand where it will keep hot. Put the Lima beans in the vacant place—and when the apples are done, remove them and put on the potatoes. Thus, you will be able to have the cooking come out even, also to chill and season your apples before sitting down to table.
